

Filippo Monge is graduated in Business Economics from the University of Torino and he completed his studies at London School of Economics and Political Science.

In 1996 he started as lecturer @ SAA - School of Management of University of Torino and, later, in 1999, he has been adjunct professor at Cà Foscari - University of Venice. He worked (2000-2002) as a junior researcher in the Italian Government destination marketing and local development programs.

He is currently an associate professor (tenure) of Strategic Communication, Corporate Governance and Applied Economics (University of Torino) and he was visiting professor (2005-2007) at MEDAC, University of Malta. Since 2007 he is an adjunct professor of “Parcours Binational” (University of Turin- Université “Jean Moulin”- Lyon). Since 2020 he is the scientific coordinator of a national executive master.

From 2010 to 2012 he was a member of National Council for Economy and Labour (CNEL, Italian government) and in 2016 he was awarded ANCE Gold Medal for his services (R&D) to construction economics.

His research interests include innovation management (climate change and occupational safety and health), financial education (for business survival), local development (such as the Sardinian economy) and customer satisfaction.

Thanks to his specific expertise he served on the boards of directors of private and public companies and organizations.